

The Character Guide

The fighters:

Asylum – What is a nut case from Pleasant Valley doing in a fight circuit? We are not sure, and we don't have the guts to ask him. All we know is he does a decent job, even if he has to be hauled away in a straightjacket right after his matches.

Banzai – As the world Sumo Champion, Banzai received a fair amount of fame in the Far East. Unfortunately, his managers in the Japanese government saw a need to make him known world wide. So with their support Banzai has joined the world of streetfighting.

Blackheart – Yeah she may be pretty good looking, but I would not tell her that. After an abusive father, a couple of very mean brothers, and one very bad relationship after another, if you have an x chromosome I would keep my distance from her if I were you.

Blood Tiger – A mercenary from the western world who learned hand to hand fighting in the Far East, Blood Tiger is an enigma in the fighting world. With the skills and speed of a ninja, Blood Tiger is definitely one of the most ferocious of fighters, yet like a true mercenary he keeps himself neutral in the rivalries of the others.

Carreon – Yes he is a dead man. But before he died, he was a tough as nails biker who fought for a living. Now with his mysterious return, he once again fights -- for an unliving. The only difference is now he has even less sympathy for his opponents, which isn't saying a whole lot.

Cyber-Fang – One of the early bio-engineered fighters, Cyber-Fang failed in his early fights and was badly injured. Not willing to give him up, his creators gave him some new cybernetic enhancements and Cyber-Fang has not looked back since!! Owooooo!!

Fatal Beauty – She won the hearts of men the night she won the beauty pageant. But shortly thereafter, a night of drunken debauchery at a seamy night club hit the tabloids and the scandal was immediate. This incident twisted her psyche and made her the woman she is today...

Glitter – With a little bit of arrogance, and a whole lot of showmanship, Glitter always needed to be making a scene. Now as a fighter he is still followed around by a whole lot of pomp and circumstance. He has over a dozen cameramen and journalists on his payroll to make sure that no matter the result of the fight, he always is shining in the spotlight.

Gore – A true monster, nobody is quite sure where Gore came from. He is obviously not one of the bio-engineered fighters that have sprung up. Gore has arrived on the scene in the very beginning and is still a mainstay today. Though his tactics are those of a brute, his aggressiveness has led to many victories and a lot of begrudging respect from the fans of the sport.

Gypsy Rose – Coming from a gypsy family in Eastern Europe, Gypsy Rose's early life was a constant struggle. Learning to fight since she was a young child, Gypsy Rose has honed her skills and is now a natural in the circuit. Despite that hard upbringing she has grown into a very beautiful woman and this has made her very loved by the fans and media.

Jagwar – In every generation one is born to defend the jungles against all invaders and threats. Jagwar, the Lord of the Jungle is that defender. But what is a defender to do in his spare time? Why compete in mock battle with other warriors to improve his skills of course.

Jarhead – Okay maggots, you are looking at the toughest SOB to ever enter the Marines. He is a multiple time All-Armed Forces Champion and is willing to prove that there are few who dare oppose him in a fight. A true career military drill sergeant, Jarhead's bark is just as strong as his bite.

Jawbreaker – What is a man who spends his entire life boxing only to see him lose both arms in a horrendous accident going to do? Simple, suck it up, get some hydraulic arms and go back to fighting. Though the sport of professional boxing no longer has interest in him, he found a new home fighting in this circuit.

Kinjite – A true ninja, Kinjite is every bit as deadly as the reputation of his type suggests. The "Invisible One" is blindingly quick and very difficult to take down. From a rival dojo as the one that trained Blood Tiger, these two have done battle countless times without either one being the clear victor.

Overkill – The prototype robot soldier, Overkill is the first of its kind. The military has sent Overkill to the streetfighting circuit in an attempt to gauge his skills in a sterilized setting. So far he seems to have exceeded everyone's expectations.

Piledriver – Well, you know something brother, this guy has been banging heads and winning championships in the world of professional wrestling for a long time. Now it is time that he takes the world of streetfighting and slams the competition. What are you gonna do when Piledriver steamrolls over you!!

R Kayne – One of the rare true masters of magic, R Kayne was a master at kung fu before turning to the mystic arts. R Kayne is a very smart fighter and knows how to enhance his physical attack with some mystical help. Against such monsters as Gore and Thunderhoof, it definitely comes in handy from time to time.

Skarr – A carry-over from the very beginning of the fighting circuit, Skarr has been through more fights than anybody. He has endured many aches, pains and injuries and has the scars to prove it. He is famous for losing an eye in an early match of a tournament and still winning the whole thing before even seeking medical attention. Talk about guts!

Skurge – A champion from the demon world of Skelos, Skurge was eventually cast out from his homeland after losing a controversial fight to a sworn enemy. As part of his punishment, he had one of his horns removed. Now banished, Skurge spends his time roaming the free worlds looking for opponents to defeat and hopefully regain his honor and his home.

Streetwolf – A gang-banger from the streets, Streetwolf has been fighting for survival for years. Now that he has a chance to fight for fame and money, he has been making the most of it. Streetwolf both wants to put that way of life behind him without forgetting where he came from.

Swiftwind – With an Olympic level of speed on a homeworld that has an extremely thick atmosphere, when Swiftwind came here he was able to run at speeds no one ever dreamed of. Deciding to don an outfit similar to what he saw in the magazines the kids were reading, Swiftwind dubbed himself the Fastest Man Alive.

Thunderhoof – Vicious. Savage. Hungry. Those words sum up the extremely menacing Minotaur. Thunderhoof may be savage, but he also has a cunning intellect and is a pretty smart fighter. He knows how to most make use of his size and his intimidating presence to best defeat his opponent.

Tusk – How do you go about trying to take on a mutated elephant? That has been the question that many have asked and few have been able to answer. One of the first of the bio-engineered fighters, Tusk is still one of the most dominant fighters the sport has ever seen.

Warblade – A great warrior from a time long past, Warblade definitely knows how to fight. His only problem is he holds his old-fashioned code of honor above all else. He will never cheat in a fight and seems to struggle internally in fights against the fairer sex. Something the likes of Blackheart and Fatal Beauty love to take advantage of.
